Dr. Jonathan Quint

Dr. Quint using the laser for surgery.

Since receiving his veterinary degree from Colorado State University in 1997, Dr. Jonathan T. Quint has had a passion for surgery. His ten years of surgical experience at a large 24-hour, multi-doctor hospital played an important role in his growth as a surgeon. "The case load was tremendous, which allowed me to experience and become proficient in many areas of surgery," says Quint.

While he enjoys both orthopedic and soft-tissue surgery, he finds the latter more rewarding. Whether it is a Cesarean section or a complicated intestinal surgery, Dr. Quint feels "at home" in the surgery suite. He has also performed a number of thoracotomies (chest surgeries) for various ailments of the heart and lungs.

"I enjoy the challenge of helping patients and their owners through surgical treatment modalities where appropriate," says Quint. The Animal Care Center of Castle Pines boasts a state-of-the-art surgical suite with full anesthetic monitoring equipment, cautery, surgical suction, surgical laser, a heated operating table and an incredibly qualified team of veterinary nurses.

The future of the Animal Care Centers' surgical scope is exciting. Quint states, "We plan on increasing our surgical depth by adding the ability to perform laparoscopic procedures." Whether your pet needs a minor mass removal or a complicated surgical procedure, be assured Dr. Quint will approach it with the care and compassion he would with his own pets.

AAHA Accreditation

We are proud to announce that we received accreditation in June 2009 from the American Animal Hospital Association (AAHA), following a comprehensive evaluation of our practice. Established in 1933, AAHA is the only organization that accredits veterinary practices in North America, and is recognized around the world as the benchmark for quality care in veterinary medicine.

Only 15 percent of small animal hospitals in the U.S. have achieved accreditation by AAHA. To become accredited, hospitals must comply with over 800 standards covering 18 different areas. Choosing an AAHA-accredited veterinary hospital for your pet's medical care ensures that the hospital you have selected has the facilities, equipment, staff and medical protocols that AAHA believes are important for the delivery of high quality care. We are committed to being continually evaluated against the most rigorous standards in veterinary care.

Senior Wellness

Dr. Brooke James and Elmo

Dr. Brooke James, along with the rest of the Animal Care Center team, is especially interested in pain management for your companion animals. We are now assessing pain in every animal that walks through our doors. We see a lot of older pets that are suffering from arthritis, but we also see older pets showing other signs of aging.

Our beloved pets are now living longer lives, thanks to increased owner awareness and advances in veterinary medicine and nutrition. There are many ailments that may accompany old age. Senior veterinary wellness exams are one of the most important things you can do to help keep your older pet healthy. "Old age" in dogs varies by breed and size. Giant breeds are considered senior at five to six years old, but smaller breeds and cats don't earn that distinction until age eight or later. The most frequently seen problems with old age are arthritis, dental disease, obesity, kidney disease, liver disease and heart disease.

Fortunately, many disease processes can be detected with physical examinations, radiographs and blood work long before they become debilitating. We are highlighting senior pet care in November, and have put together special senior wellness package pricing to help you get screening tests for your pet. We would like to help your pets age comfortably, so they may gracefully enjoy their golden years.

November is our Senior Pet Month!

We're offering special Senior Wellness Package pricing.
